Discovering Adobe Photoshop Touch Photoshop Touch offers more fluid ways to manipulate images and layers, as you can see in Figure 1-7. It is available as a PC program and as an app for the iPad and iPhone. Figure 1-7: Use these handy features to edit a landscape photograph. Photoshop Touch enables you to focus on choosing images from the large catalog of stock images from the Touch website and quickly import them into your Photoshop document and create custom templates for specific purposes. This program is ideal for anyone who wants to work more efficiently with image, video, and motion graphics files. Finally, Photoshop and Photoshop Elements offer online services and options for things you can't do with the program. You can try to run the online services or use the online editing tools with your Photoshop program, but they don't work on the same images as the program you use offline. (We discuss them in detail in Book I Chapter 4.)

Editing in Photoshop You don't have to be a graphic artist to use Photoshop. With ease, you can alter your images to correct color, exposure, contrast, and many other problems. You also have the capacity to add new elements to an image to change its purpose. But most of the time you create images that are not color balanced or that are over or underexposed. In order to correct such issues, you need to view the image as a RGB image and then apply an exposure correction. When you have to correct color problems, you may need to adjust color balance in the color tools (Button B in Figure 1-8) or in the Adjustments window. You can also control the way the colors look by using the Levels tool (Button A). Figure 1-8 shows the screen settings for Levels, which you can use to control the overall tonal balance in an image. You can also use the Curves tool (Button C) for fine-tuning colors. These adjustments are the most important for creating images that look good, regardless of whether they're color balanced. Figure 1-8: These tools help you make your images better. Keep in mind that the functions

Q: Can someone explain to me the diffs between IO/RX/TX? I am currently reading the RX Lab 8 - Upon reading, I do not fully understand the difference between IO, RX, and TX. Further, I do not understand what areas these rings fall under. IO, could be "Input", "Output", and just plain "input?" RX, could be "Receiver", "Received", "Receiver/transmitter/transmitter/receiver?" TX, could be "Transmitter", "Transmitted", "Transmitter/receiver?" Does anyone have a clear definition as to the use of these rings? A: In a nutshell, the IO ring is the set of things that are always sent to/received from the front end board (usually the Raspberry PI). The RX/TX/RER rings are the set of things that can be set up for reading and writing by the firmware, as well as taking things away from the front end board. Q: How to update entries in list with the entries of another list? I have two lists: LineItemOne LineItemTwo LineItemOne: StockCode: A100 Description: A description LineItemTwo: StockCode: A200 Description: A description What I need is to be able to query all the entries in LineItemOne and update the related entries in LineItemTwo with the values from LineItemOne. For example, if A100 is found in LineItemOne, update StockCode in LineItemTwo to be A100. Any ideas on how to do this? A: There are many ways to do this depending on how much you want to introduce the programmer to the concept of Linq. Here is one example:

var matched = LineItemOne .Where(x => x.StockCode == "A100") .ToList(); if (matched.Any()) { var matchedStockCode = matched.First(); var matchedDescription = matched.First().Description; LineItemTwo.StockCode = matchedStockCode.StockCode; LineItemTwo.Description = matchedDescription; }

Pituitary tissue transdifferentiates into mature adipose tissue after age. The prevalence of obesity is increasing worldwide and the mechanisms by which adipose tissue develops are not yet understood. Therefore, the mouse pituitary gland was chosen as a model for studying the hetero-transdifferentiation of mature adipose tissue in response to adipogenic signals. Pituitary tissue from 21-day-old mice was cultured in the presence of 3T3-L1 conditioned medium and 10% fetal bovine serum. The subsequent differentiation of pituitary cells into adipocytes was monitored by measuring lipid accumulation and mRNA expression of adipogenic markers. In vitro differentiation of pituitary cells towards the adipocyte lineage was associated with the presence of genes encoding proteins that regulate adipogenesis in adipocytes. Pituitary cells demonstrated an induction in preadipocyte and adipocyte-specific genes, including the transcription factors, CCAAT/enhancer binding protein (C/EBP) alpha and peroxisome proliferator-activated receptor (PPARgamma). Interestingly, we observed an upregulation in the endoplasmic reticulum (ER) resident-specific protein GRP78 in differentiating pituitary cells. Moreover, we demonstrated that pituitary cells accumulated triglycerides at similar levels observed with the mature adipocyte cells. Thus, we show the hetero-transdifferentiation of mature adipose tissue. This pituitary-adipose transdifferentiation is associated with the upregulation of C/EBPalpha and PPARgamma and requires the presence of mature adipocytes. On Saturday the Leyton Orient fans group The Magpi have launched a campaign on the O'Neills website asking them to either: 1. Stand by their word and give Leyton Orient the home game against Notts County OR 2. Part with their famous snooker trophy to help Leyton Orient in their battle to avoid going out of the FA Cup at the preliminary round stage. www.omenorth.co.uk/Do/the-Magpi-2015-FA-Cup-Home-Game-Advisory-Campaign/ For many years the Magpi group has supported Leyton Orient by organising the fans' pre-match walk around the pitch. After a 4-0 home defeat to former FA Cup finalists Barnet in March the Magpi have decided to change the theme to one that should hopefully see a better showing, that
